

There's a myth that says we're 22x more more likely to remember a fact from a story than on its own.¹

Robust meta-analytic evidence² finds we're about 21% more likely³ to remember storytelling...

Myth

Reality

... while a 21% lift may not make headlines, it does get results.

1. archive.is/MizBp

2. doi.org/10.3758/s13423-020-01853-1

3. Hedge's $g = .55 \approx$ Cohen's $u_3 = .71$ assuming a .5 base rate representing an increase of .21., (ajthurston.com/u3)